Course description:

This seminar entails a close reading of Lev Tolstoi's Anna Karenina, with two goals in mind: (1) to ensure students' intimate (and critically nuanced) familiarity with formal aspects of the novel; and (2) to address a series of issues arising from an attentive reading of it: e.g., evolution of genre, novel theory, narratology, intertextuality, etc.

Primary texts include a society tale ("svetskaia povest")—the genre on which Anna Karenina expands—Tolstoi's Semeinoi schast'e (1859), and Anna Karenina. A knowledge of Evgenii Onegin, the conclusion of which serves as the polemical starting point for Tolstoi's novel, is assumed.

Secondary texts encompass the whole gamut of scholarship on Anna Karenina: modified Formalism (Eikhenbaum, Schultze), Freudian and Lacanian analyses (Wasiolek, Armstrong), feminism (Evans, Mandelker), and a moral-philosophical (what skeptics and deconstructionists might call "ideological") approach that draws, above all, on extensions of Bakhtin (Morson).

Course requirements:

(1) reading and regular in-class discussion of the assigned texts; (2) regular class presentations; (3) one long paper of approx. 20 pages.

Required Reading:

If possible, we should all use the same edition of Anna Karenina (Kharkov/Moscow: FOLIO, 1998). The only other book you need to purchase is Approaches to Teaching Tolstoy's Anna Karenina, ed. Liza Knapp & Amy Mandelker ((New York: MLA: 2003)—referenced in the syllabus as MLAAK). To the extent that my schedule permits, I shall try to send you PDF versions of articles listed on the syllabus. For all other required readings you will need to check items out of Hillman Library.
